

Vishwa's Play Project: A Lovely Breakfast

Sarah Wigglesworth, Dining Table Sequence, Ink on Paper, 1997

'The rituals of eating played out on a plane of the dining table are similar to rituals of domestic life' - Sarah Wigglesworth, 2002

Dining is associated with being social, connected to a group, or community. It's representation, from Da Vinci's Last Supper to Dali's Les Dinner de Gala and Judy Chicago's The Dinner Party, in films and on the stage, in household manuals and menu suggestions all reinforce this communal notion. But what happens when we dine alone?

Vishwa's Play Project: A Lovely Breakfast

Play Project: "A Lovely Breakfast"

- aim of the play project is to fictionalise the act of dining alone
- Visit Lovely Villa - Rohan's home in Borivali, built in the 1970s and designed by architect Charles Correa, it was imagined as the ideal community.
- Imagine yourself as the protagonist, the breakfast as a prop and Lovely Villa as the location.
- Using the villa's floor plan, open to sky terraces and common open spaces, find a corner or room/space to 'eat' your breakfast alone.

Project outcome

- You must always be present within this breakfast.
- Describe sights, sounds, taste, touch or smell - indulging your observations and daydreams.
- Reference an art work that is descriptive of the act of being by oneself.
- Representation of 'A Lovely Breakfast' can be in any medium, including zine, photograph, drawing, video clips, collage, poem, etc.
